DETAILED ACTION

Response to Arguments

1. Applicant's arguments regarding the 35 USC 112 rejection have been considered and are persuasive. This rejection is withdrawn.
2. Applicant's further arguments with respect to claims 1 and 13 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

3. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

4. Claims 1-6 and 13-19 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by the Mozilla reference (<http://cvs-www.mozilla.org/webtools/bonsai/cvsblame.cgi?file=mozilla-org/html/projects/silentdl/index.html&rev=1.1&root=/cvsroot>).

5. Regarding claim 1, the Mozilla reference teaches a system for downloading portions of a remotely located network object comprising:

- a. A client (line 19).
- b. A server facility configured to be accessed via an electronic data network by the client and to send data corresponding to at least one portion of a network object to the client via the electronic data network (lines 18-22). Note that a server holds the content to be downloaded.

- c. A software delegate residing on the client and configured to control an amount of the data and a size of the at least one portion of the network object to be downloaded from the server facility to the client independent of a user of the client and based solely upon an operating state of the client (lines 18-22, 43, 106-108, 138-140). Please note that the reference shows that a large file is downloaded in portions over time only when the computer is idle. This is why the server must support byte ranges, so the download of a single file can be continued at a particular byte number.

6. Regarding claims 2 and 14, the reference teaches all the limitations as applied to claims 1 and 13, respectively. It further teaches means wherein the electronic data network is the Internet (lines 81-83).

7. Regarding claim 3, the reference teaches all the limitations as applied to claim 1. It further teaches means wherein the software delegate is a Javascript applet (line 24).

8. Regarding claim 4, the reference teaches all the limitations as applied to claim 1. It further teaches means wherein the amount of data is a range of bytes and the size of the that at least one portion is dependent on the operating state (lines 18-22, 106-107).

9. Regarding claims 5 and 17, the reference teaches all the limitations as applied to claims 1 and 16, respectively. It further teaches means wherein the operating state is an idle state (lines 20-21).

10. Regarding claim 6 and 18, the reference teaches all the limitations as applied to claims 1 and 16, respectively. It further teaches means wherein the operating state is a busy state (lines 20-21).

11. Regarding claim 13, the Mozilla reference teaches a system for facilitating downloading portions of a remotely located network object with means for:

- a. Using a client computer to access a server facility via an electronic data network (line 19).
- b. Receiving, at the client computer, portions of a network object from the server facility (lines 18-22).
- c. Storing the portions of a network object within the client computer to create locally a completely downloaded copy of the network object (lines 18-22, 96-98).
- d. Controlling a size of the portions of the network object received from the server facility independent of a user of the client and based solely upon an operating state of the client computer (lines 18-22, 43, 106-108, 138-140).

12. Regarding claim 15, the reference teaches all the limitations as applied to claim 13. It further teaches means wherein the size of the portions of the network object in the controlling step is a range of bytes (lines 106-107).

13. Regarding claim 16, the reference teaches all the limitations as applied to claim 13. It further teaches means wherein the size of the portions of the network object in the controlling step is dependent on the operating state of the client computer (lines 20-21).

14. Regarding claim 19, the reference teaches all the limitations as applied to claim 13. They further teach means wherein the controlling step is performed by a software delegate residing on the computer (lines 18-19).

Allowable Subject Matter

15. Claims 7-12 are allowed.
